Background information:

In October 2017, the Slovak Republic plans to organize a "Forum on Integration". It is also going to focus on social innovations helping migrants and refugees to enter the labour market. The Forum shall be composed of experts from the state administration, local level, non-governmental organizations, migrant representatives, social innovators from private companies, civil society, educational institutions, social companies, employers, etc.

Social innovations are understood as strategies, concepts, ideas and activities, which support and enhance the operation of society in a given field. The Forum on Integration shall focus on facilitation of employment and self-employment of target groups.

These activities try to find jobs for this particular group of persons. In addition, there are various offers targeted at business founders and young entrepreneurs. However, this target group is not limited to migrants. Also the Project "Mentoring for Migrants" should be mentioned here. This Project specifically supports migrants and People with a Migration Background with labour market Integration in the form of mentoring-partnerships. Migrants have been a target group with the Public Employment Service (PES) since 2010. Annual labour market goals specify the actions to be taken all

The contact points in Vienna, Linz, Graz and Innsbruct offer advice on the recognition and assessment of qualifications obtained abroad. The first one is being implemented as a pilot at several regional branches of the Labour Offices from early 2016. The task of the integration worker is personalized and specialized counselling for migrants-clients of the Labour Office. The second one has just been approved and will be implemented at Brno Municipality from September 2017. TCNs may register as jobseekers if they are residing in Estonia either permanently, on the basis of a temporary residence permit, have received refugee status or temporary/subsidiary international protection or are applying for asylum (under the conditions provided by law). These services include counselling, work trials and placements, mobility benefits, training, business start-up subsidies and several other services for job-seekers. In September 2017, the Estonian Unemployment Insurance Fund will also launch a new initiative 'My First Job in Estonia' intended solely for the beneficiaries of international protection (BIPs). The Welcoming Programme, a set of free trainings aimed at foreign nationals to facilitate their integration, has a thematic module on work and entrepreneurship as well. Alongside state-provided services, two NGOs involved with offering support person services to the BIPs - Estonian Refugee Council and Johannes Mihkelson Centre - are planning to introduce new services and activities directed at job seekers by the end of 2017, but the exact nature of these services is unclear at this stage. A list of labour market services offered by the Estonian Unemployment Insurance Fund and their description may be found on this website: https://www.tootukassa.ee/eng/content/services. Information about, who qualifies as a jobseeker is available here: https://www.tootukassa.ee/eng/content/looking-job/registration-jobseeker. One such scheme is business start-up subsidy. It is financial aid to support self-

The subsidy (up to 4,474 euros) is offered to a jobseeker, who is older than 18, has completed business training; or has vocational or higher education in economics or experience in business. More information about the scheme, the application process and requirements may be found here: https://www.tootukassa.ee/eng/content/services/business-start-subsidy). Other notable schemes include work trial offering and application process induce and application process.
		trial, offering an opportunity to try out a job before entering into an employment contract (https://www.tootukassa.ee/eng/content/services/work-trial), and work placement, offering the opportunity to improve professional knowledge, skills and to get paid job experience (https://www.tootukassa.ee/eng/content/services/work-placement). There is no online description of 'My First Job in Estonia' available yet, but the scheme will entail wage subsidies (up to 50% of related labour costs per calendar month) for employers for 12 months as of the commencement of employment by a BIP. Employers will also receive additional funding to provide workplace mentoring over the first 4 months to a BIP.

		Moreover, fees up to €2,500 euros related to language courses, translating services and/or qualification assessment and recognition procedures will be compensated for the employer as well. France	Yes	1. Yes 2. Main provisions of the law on foreigners' rights of 7 March 2016 were enforced on 1st November 2016. The main objectives of this law are to improve the reception and integration of foreign newcomers wishing to settle permanently in France and to attract talents and knowledge. Regarding integration, it establishes a personalized pathway of 5 years based on an interview which assesses the needs of the applicant and on civic and language training courses. A note of 27th February enables to apply at department level the three-year framework arrangement (2016-2019) of 24th November 2016 between the State, the French Office for Immigration and Integration (OFII) and the French national employment agency in favour of vocational integration. This applies to first-time arrivals who hold a residence permit, wish to settle permanently in France and have signed the Republican Integration Contract (CIR), which was created through the law of 7th March 2016. This arrangement aims to improve the original cooperation launched in 2010 to facilitate the access to work by implementing an individual and adapted process and increasing complementarity of service offering and expertise. Indeed, the goal of this new arrangement is to make the economic sphere more accessible to all the foreign national newcomers, including refugees. A professional integration pathway for the beneficiaries of international protection has been implemented in June on an experimental basis for a period of eight months. This programme, signed by the ministries of Interior, Employment and Housing, "Pôle Emploi" (national employment agency) and the French Office for Immigration and Integration (OFII), covers 1,000 beneficiaries of international protection and includes accommodation, catering, social and professional support, job workshops and graduating training offers in the framework of the establishment of a career plan. It contains a broad range of initiatives in areas such as access to citizenship and public services; education; employment; political participation, and more. Its implementation is overseen by a cross-sectoral committee, involving the relevant public authorities. Some of our key civil society organisations working in the area of integration also have a voice. http://www.integration.ie/website/omi/omiwebv6.nsf/page/JWKY-AJEE6A1021139-en/$File/Migrant_Integration_Strategy_English.pdf Some specific aims of the Strategy in relation the employment of migrants include: • The inclusion of a target of 1% for the employment of EEA migrants and people from minority ethnic communities in the civil service (in most cases civil service employment is not open to non-EEA nationals). This issue is important in terms of beginning the process of making the civil service representative of the broader population. • the inclusion of a language component in education and training programmes for unemployed migrants with poor English proficiency • Initiatives to ensure that migrant needs in relation to skills acquisition and labour market activation are addressed. 1. In Italy, social innovation in mainly pushed forward by NGOs, social enterprises and private entities. Latvia	Yes	1. On 1 January 2016, the State Employment Agency (hereinafter - SEA) started a two-year project "The labour market integration of refugees and persons, who have been granted alternative status in Latvia", supported by the European Social Fund. The aim of the project is to promote a sustainable integration of refugees and persons, who have been granted alternatives status (subsidiary protection) into the labour market and their inclusion into the society. 2. Latvian language training and providing information on the labour market have been priority measures to promote employment of refugees. The SEA has also implemented a targeted and pro-active approach through individual counselling and profiling with a view to assessing skills of refugees. The project includes the following activities: - Introductory courses "Work opportunities in Latvia" for asylum seekers; the lectures have been held for 151 asylum seekers in 6 languages Individual consultations to asylum seekers on job opportunities in Latvia. Since February 2017, the SEA has also provided individual consultations to asylum seekers about work opportunities in Latvia at the Accommodation Centre for Asylum Seekers "Mucenicki" once per week Information materials on employment opportunities and the SEA's services; - Support services for job search and developing skills (informal education activities, including Latvian language training; subsidized work places for employees; vocational training programmes; community work schemes). The SEA provides the opportunity to participate in three language courses during one year period, receiving additional financial support in the amount of 5 EUR for a training day. Each language level within language courses without intermediary language has been divided into two sublevels, ensuring a more gradual language acquisition. A new measure combining Latvian language acquisition and employment is also being developed. Until the end of July 2017, 82 refugees and persons, who have been granted alternative status in Latvia, have been registered at the SEA' sasistance, 12 of them are working (mainly in professions where Latvian language use is limited, e.g. in a supermarket, a storehouse, a non-governmental organisation, a medical institution, etc.). Luxemb ourg	Yes	 Yes. There are several initiatives in the private sector in order to facilitate the access of the labour market. International protection applicants and beneficiaries of international protection One example is the "Connections" project implemented by ASTI (Association for the support of migrant workers) with the financial support of the Mateneen project of the "Oeuvre national de secours Grand Duchesse Charlotte" ("Oeuvre") aims to prepare the refugees for the Luxembourg labour market. The main objectives are 1) the creation of links between the international protection applicants and the beneficiaries of international protection (refugee and subsidiary protection status), the Luxembourg companies and the labour market; 2) sensibilisation of those refugees to normal life in Luxembourg society, to the requirements of the Luxembourg labour market and 3) the mobilisation of economic stakeholders in order to facilitate the access to the labour market of IPAs and beneficiaries of international protections. The Oeuvre financially supported a new project that specifically targets IPAs. "Work and integration portfolio" by Reech eng Hand (Archevêché) encourages IPAs to make positive use of the time required for the examination of asylum applications by creating personal folders (individual's formal qualifications but also their uncertified skills). On the basis of the individuals' profile, the aim is to offer them meetings and internships with business people operating in Luxembourg to discuss the work situation and whether their skill sets match the requirements in Luxembourg. Together with the trade union LCGB (Lëtzebuerger Chrëschtleche Gewerkschaftsbond - Luxembourgis Christian trade union), the project will also offer asylum seekers the chance to gather information on the reality of the job market in Luxembourg, both general and relating to specific domains. The INSITU Jobs project proposed of personalized interviews for the elaboration of the professional project of the applicant (skills assessment, help to draft a Curriculum Vitae or motivation letters, valorization of the professional experience of the applicant, help for the recognition of diplomas, to provide administrative information and guidance in regards to the relevant stakeholders). The personalized interviews are conducted in several languages: French, Portuguese, English, Serbo-Croatian and Arabic. "Sleeves Up": • Training workshops prepare participants for creating their own businesses. Subjects include the basics of Luxembourg's economy, the business "pitch," determinations of commercial viability, financing, administrative procedures, tax issues, and marketing. Though "Sleeves Up" provides its own approach, each participant learns to identify and integrate diverse resources already in place. • Individualized mentoring and follow-up to help participants develop their ideas, overcome obstacles to implementation, and obtain relevant assistance. • An optional internship for participants who completed "Sleeves Up" training workshops and desires placement in a company with similar activities as his/her project. http://www.sleevesup.lu/ 3. +	Malta	Yes	 Yes, the Maltese Government has different social innovations in the field of employment and self-employment of migrants. These include employment-related opportunities and upskilling measures for better integration of Third Country Nationals. Labour market integration and the acquisition of basic skills is the foundation for further learning and the gateway to employment and social inclusion. It also contributes to becoming part of the host country's social and economic life. Against this background, Jobsplus, the Maltese Public Employment Service, offers a number of services to all those who want to access the labour market, including migrants and third country nationals. Jobsplus offers labour market related information and advice for individual jobseekers including career guidance and information on learning opportunities. Third-country nationals can access these services according to their 'qualification status'. In addition, a resource on living and working in Malta is available for third country nationals, which is available in nine different languages. Third country nationals are also entitled to participate in employment-related education opportunities, which include short courses, traineeships, work exposure, as well as trade testing. Such initiatives cover a variety of skills, such as employability and life skills, as well as manual skills and career-specific courses. Jobsplus offers English and Maltese language courses of varying levels for those registering for employment as well as other interested parties. Some of these courses are compulsory for registrants to further increase employability as well as aid in the integration process. Moreover, in May 2017, Jobsplus set up the Job Brokerage Scheme which aims to regulate employment and working conditions for migrant workers, whereby employers in need of short term casual labour may request in person or by e-mail the service of migrant jobseekers. Jobsplus will identify potential jobseekers and inform them of this opportunity. These employment-related education and training opportunities aim to further increase employability and aid in the integration process by equipping participants with necessary skills to help make daily and working life run more smoothly. These opportunities are also aimed at strengthening communication and social well-being. The link where one can find further information is https://jobsplus.gov.mt/ 3. N/A.

Netherla nds	Yes	 Previously, the strategy of the Dutch government was to focus on strengthening the skill set of migrants. However, research of the Netherlands Institute for Social Research, has showed that the deprivation in education of people with a migration background compared to people without a migration background, is getting smaller. This, however, does not translate into a higher labour market participation of people with a migration background. Therefore, the Ministry of Social Affairs has started with a different approach: making the labour market more accessible by reducing prejudices and discrimination. The Ministry of Social Affairs and Employment is working – in addition to enforcement and awareness by employers – on new ways to counteract discrimination and negative image formation during the recruitment and selection of new employees. In addition, we are aware of a project of IOM called Skills2Work: http://www.iom- nederland.nl/en/integration/skills2work Discrimination is mainly pre-entry a problem. If someone has found a job, discrimination plays a smaller role. [1] The same goes for internships. Young people with a migration background have to apply more often in order to get an internship, but once they have an internship, they often get the offer to stay.[2]

		Discrimination is not always a conscious process. Employers want to select on the basis of quality, but, sometimes, due to imperfections during the recruitment and selection process, room for prejudices comes up. Employers often have little time for the selection of the candidates and look for signals of capacity. Moreover, employers are risk-avoiding in recruiting and selecting new personnel. This means that employers are mainly looking at work experience they recognize and a fitting education. [3] The lack of information or information that is less recognizable for an employer is often assessed negatively. Suited candidates with a deviated profile, for example people with a different ethnical background, can therefore be rejected during the first selection. Or, as the Netherlands Institute for Social Research, has stated: the choice for indigenous Dutch is seen as a 'safe choice', or as a choice with the least risks. [4] The core of the approach of the Ministry of Social Affairs is therefore to encourage employers to have, previous to the selection procedure, as much objective knowledge as possible. The Ministry is working on three types of activities: 1) To get acquainted by orientating activities 2) To get acquainted by introduction to employers by a trusted person (for example an intermediary) 3) To get acquainted by a more information on bringing in skills in the selection process.

Sweden	Yes	1. Yes. The term "social innovation" is somewhat difficult to define, but in Sweden, several initiatives have been developed to facilitate the integration of newly arrived migrants with regard to employment. Some of these initiatives have been developed at local (municipality) or regional level, but there are also measures that were initiated at national level, or financed by the central government. The Swedish EMN NCP cannot provide a full picture of all initiatives, especially not regarding local and regional ones, but two examples are given below.

United Kingdo	Yes	 2. 1) Since 2015, the Swedish Government, the social partners and the Public Employment Service have been working to establish "fast tracks" to labour market entry of newly arrived beneficiaries of protection. The aim is to create more rapid ways into the labour market for newly arrived immigrants with education or skills in shortage occupations. To pave the way for these fast tracks, the social partners have been given the opportunity to apply for funds for promotion and development measures. Currently, there are fast tracks into roughly 20 professions. For more information, please see http://www.government.se/articles/2015/12/fast-tracka-quicker-introduction-of-newly-arrived-immigrants/. 2) The Swedish Public Employment Service has developed the online portal "jobskills". Jobskills is a new digital tool, which asylum seekers can use to document and explain (in their own languages) their competencies and to describe previous work experiences. Both informal work experiences and experiences that are proven by formal diplomas or certificates can be described. The jobskills toll can even translate competence profiles to Swedish, and the users can make their profiles visible for employers. The tool also shows what a migrant can do to be able to start working in a certain profession, e.g. obtain a formal recognition of a foreign qualification or apply for complementary education. For more information, please see https://jobskills.se/. The tool is available in several languages. 3) In the Budget Bill for 2017, the Swedish Government directed more funds to new initiatives for early language learning and mapping of skills and experiences among asylum seekers. The allocated funds can be used by civil society organisations, or in some cases by municipalities, to offer various integration-related activities. 1. No.
